Key Takeaways

Comoro Trough Cable Trays are available from multiple suppliers, with prices varying based on material, size, surface treatment, and order volume.

Price Range and Suppliers

Prices are not fixed and typically depend on factors such as tray dimensions, load capacity, and customization options.

Factory-direct or OE

M orders often provide cost savings and tailored solutions.

Material and Surface Treatment

Trough cable trays are commonly made from galvanized steel, stainless steel, or powder-coated steel, offering corrosion resistance and durability. Surface treatments include electro-galvanized, hot-dip galvanized, and powder coating, which influence both price and suitability for specific environments, such as outdoor installations or corrosive industrial settings.

Features Affecting Cost

Load capacity: Heavier-duty trays for industrial or telecom applications cost more. Tray type: Fully enclosed trough trays provide better protection but are more expensive than perforated or mesh trays. Customization: OEM or tailored sizes, bends, and accessories can increase cost.

Volume discounts: Bulk orders often reduce per-unit pricing.

Applications

Trough cable trays are ideal for control cables, communication cables, thermocouples, and sensitive systems in industries such as oil, electric power, light industry, and telecommunications. They provide easy maintenance, heat dissipation, and interference shielding, which can justify higher initial costs for critical installations.

Purchasing Tips

Request quotes from multiple suppliers to compare pricing and delivery options. Consider future expansion by selecting trays with 20–30% extra capacity. Ensure compatibility with environmental conditions (humidity, chemical exposure, temperature) to avoid premature wear.

Check for warranty and after-sales support, especially for large-scale installations. For specific pricing, it is recommended to contact suppliers directly through platforms like go4WorldBusiness, Europages, or Made-in-China to obtain tailored quotes based on your project requirements.
