Key Takeaways

Gao'an photovoltaic cable trays are modular, corrosion-resistant systems designed for efficient cable management in solar power installations. OverviewGao'an photovoltaic cable trays are engineered to support and organize electrical cables in solar power plants, including DC cables from photovoltaic panels, AC power cables, control cables, and communication wiring. These trays are designed to withstand harsh outdoor conditions such as UV exposure, high temperatures, dust, moisture, and wind, ensuring long-term reliability and safety.

Material and Construction

Many Gao'an cable trays are made from Al-Zn-Mg coated steel, which combines the durability of aluminum with the electrochemical protection of zinc. This coating provides 5–10 times higher corrosion resistance than ordinary hot-dip galvanized steel, especially at cut edges, and forms a dense protective layer over time. The trays are modular and standardized, allowing for easy assembly, painting, and installation.

Some models may also use stainless steel or aluminum alloys for enhanced corrosion resistance and lightweight performance.
